Reparations = Justice

WEALTH generated by African American Slave Labor in the U.S. From 1776-1865 (89 years)
if five million blacks had been paid at the rate of:

- An eight hour day at $2.50 per hour =
$2,136,000,000,000.00 (two trillion
one hundred thirty-six billion dollars)
- An eight hour day at $5.00 per hour =
$4,272,000,000,000.00 (four trillion

the notions of normativity and tradition are questionable. Given our social inheritances of eurocentrism, colonialism, capitalism, and european patriarchy, one simply cannot make the case for such an idea as normative or traditional. Whether so-called American, African, Caribbean, European, or otherwise, no contemporary civilization has escaped the wreck of these social inheritances. I say wreck because alongside the settler-colonial traditions, are the counter narratives that present problems for any claims for normativity. The maroons, zapatistas, queers, AWOLs, and Black folks, generally, are a few. There are many more. From a normative claim, these populations are considered extraordinarily disruptive and socially deviant. I see them as being quite normal.
